A charter school operates under its own guidelines, yet remains accountable to the state and local education authorities for student performance and finances. This autonomy comes with specific responsibilities and regular assessments by district or state officials. Unlike private schools, charter schools are public institutions that don't charge tuition fees or have entrance exams. Aspire Public Schools stands out among other charter organizations due to its reputation as a leading not-for-profit Charter Management Organization (CMO). Focused on providing high-quality education within an efficient framework, Aspire does not impose admission requirements and welcomes all California state residents interested in enrolling. Since funding for each student follows them to their chosen public school, charter schools receive state, local, and federal funds similar to traditional public schools. With a strong emphasis on personalized learning, Aspire's schools are intentionally kept small, allowing for an average of 360 students at elementary levels and around 560 students in secondary settings. The student-to-teacher ratio is approximately 24:1 in early grades and 29:1 in later years, with some classes having as few as 17 students per teacher. School uniform policies are determined by each campus's community, though most Aspire schools adopt a uniform policy. The Aspire Ben Holt College Preparatory Academy is a school that provides a rigorous education for students, preparing them for college. Its academic program is designed to be challenging and comprehensive, helping students develop the skills and knowledge they need for success in higher education. The academy focuses on excellence and readiness for college, creating an environment that encourages growth and achievement among its students. Notably, the school has experienced significant growth, with a 50% increase in student population over five years, and a 133% rise in teacher numbers during the same period. Aspire Ben Holt College Preparatory Academy is highly ranked within California, standing #1400 out of 9602 schools (top 20%). In terms of test scores, the school has shown improvement over the years, with notable percentages in reading/language arts and math tests. The student-to-teacher ratio at the academy remains relatively low, at 25:1. My husband and I are both Stockton-born and raised, and we recently returned to the area after spending a couple of years in Turlock, where our baby boy was born. I'm proud to have been part of the first graduating class at Ben Holt High School in 2007 and thrilled to be back here, witnessing the significant growth the school has undergone over the past decade. It's also an honor to support students in their education, just as some of the same teachers who inspired me years ago are still here today. Some of these staff members had a profound impact on my life, and I hope to have a similar influence on the students here now. Nanci Holtz has over 23 years of experience in education, starting her career by teaching middle school math in Tracy. She later served as the coordinator for a math grant with Stockton Unified and an instructional coach for Lodi Unified before joining the Benjamin Holt team in 2009. At Holt, she taught Algebra 2 and Geometry while supporting struggling students and their math teachers. Nanci is a native Stocktonian with three daughters, one husband, one cat, and one puppy. When not working, she spends most of her free time managing two softball teams coached by her husband for her youngest and oldest girls. Her middle daughter has traded softball for dance, cooking, and acting. Nanci's guilty pleasures include watching reality TV and reading gossip magazines. My name is Leslie Renee. I serve as the Dean of Instruction at BHA. My job is to ensure that our students receive the best instruction possible, so they can succeed in college and life. I have three amazing children who are now adults and two adorable grandchildren. I was the first female in my family to graduate from college. A lifelong learner, I earned my first degree, an AA in Social Sciences at Chabot College in Hayward, followed by a BA in Human Spirituality at CSUEB. I then earned my teaching credential at College of Holy Names in Oakland and later pursued further education with a M.S. Ed. from Walden University and a doctoral degree, Ed. S. in Leadership of Curriculum and Instruction, from University of Phoenix. As a seasoned online teacher educator with 5 years under University of Phoenix, I balance work and personal life by horseback riding or playing golf with husband and father. Proudly serving College for Certain, I'm part of an educational community that aims to empower students nationwide. Aspire Public Schools caters to over 15,000 California and Tennessee students. Established in 2003, Benjamin Holt College Preparatory Academy now operates on two campuses: middle and high school levels. Six Aspire schools in Stockton offer grades K-12, serving a diverse student population representative of the region. We're proud to offer a supportive community that fosters growth and success. Given article text here I honed my teaching skills in K-5 schools within the Sylvan School District of Modesto, where I worked as both a classroom teacher and school leader. During my initial six years with Aspire Schools, I led a school that demonstrated that college-ready students could be found among all backgrounds. Most of my students were the first generation to receive college acceptance letters, and our school achieved remarkable success, ranking as the highest-performing secondary school in the county. As principal from 2016-2018, I aimed to revitalize a previously struggling school community. This role allowed me to reconnect with educators and students alike, emphasizing their value and worth. My return to Aspire revitalized my passion for education. The organization is driving meaningful conversations about what it truly means to be an educated student. I invite you to share your personal educational journey and listen as I explore ours together. While challenges persist, collaboration will undoubtedly lead to lasting impacts on our children's education. Join the Aspire BHA Team! I've always been there for students navigating college applications, putting in countless hours to ensure their success. My dedication has never wavered, even when the going got tough. As a student at Aspire Benjamin Holt College Preparatory Academy myself, I have mixed feelings about this school. While the teachers are excellent and the curriculum is top-notch, I found the support system lacking. The school's gated environment provides a safe haven, but I wish the administration would be more responsive to concerns, particularly when it comes to serious incidents on campus. On a positive note, I believe Aspire Academy does a great job preparing students for college by offering a diverse range of classes, including AP and college-level courses. The fact that two years of college can be completed while still in high school is a significant advantage. The school's diversity and welcoming atmosphere make it easy for students to get involved in clubs and sports. However, I do think the school could improve its sports program and provide more support for student-athletes. Compared to other schools, Aspire Academy falls short in this area. Despite this, my overall experience has been positive, and I'm grateful for the opportunities I've had here.
