How to change my phone region on android. How do i change my region on my android phone.

There is no doubt that your Google account is an incredible resource, especially when it comes to using services like Google Play, through which you can access millions of the latest Android apps, games, movies, books, magazines and so much more. Depressingly, however, many of these applications are geographically restricted. This means that you can't download or install these apps if you are not in a supported location. There are ways to work around this, luckily. In the following article, we'll go through the various methods to change Google account location, so that you can explore and apply services and applications regardless of regional restrictions or local limitations. Due to its nature, the various services and applications which are offered by Google Play depend significantly on your present location, which is provided to Google Play via your device's GPS. For example, there may be a particular Google Play product which you believe may be a valuable resource or an interesting pastime for you, but it's not available in your country. Similarly, there may be location-based contents and features within applications and services which can't be accessed in your particular location. It would make sense, therefore, that by changing your location in your Google account, you will have the opportunity to access the applications and services of your choice and enjoy everything they have to offer without constraint. On the other hand, there may be situations where you have temporarily or permanently moved to another country, and you would now like to adjust your location in Google Play in order to reflect that change. Ultimately, your Google Play location will determine the content you can see and access. When it comes to changing your location, however, it's important to keep the following points in mind: 1. You can only change your Google Play location once a year. This means that if you do change it, you won't be able to change it back for a year. 2. When you change your country, you also won't be able to use the Google Play balance that you have in your old country in your new country. 3. There is a risk of you losing access to certain services and products if they're not available in your new country. Part 2. How to Change Location on Google 1. How to Change Country in Google Play on Computer 1. Open your computer's browser, and then go to Google Pay. 2. At the top, select Settings. Under Payments profile, go to Country/Region and then click the edit icon. 3. To create a new Google Pay profile and connect it to a new country or region, first click Create new profile. Then follow the on-screen instructions. 4. The Google Play Store automatically changes to the new country or region. This change can take up to 48 hours, but also sooner. 2. How to Change Country in Google Play on Android Phone 1. Launch the Google Play Store app on your Android phone, then tap the profile icon at the top right. 2. Go to Settings > General > Account and device preferences > Country and profiles. 3. Tap the country where you want to add an account and add a payment method for that country. It may take up to 48 hours to update your profile. Part 3. What if I Can't Change Google Account Country Successfully? With the two methods provided above, you will only be able to change your Google account location successfully if you provide a relevant payment method. What's more, you can only do this once a year, which does limit you considerably. Typically, Google Play will be connected to your device's default Google account. A potential solution, therefore, is to reset your Google account's location if you're looking for something more permanent. For example, you could create a completely new Google account that is based in another country and connect that to your Google Play instead. One disadvantage, however, is that this would be only a one-time exception because resetting your Google account repeatedly simply isn't feasible. If you want to reset your Google account in order to change its location, then the steps are as follows: 1. Go to Settings > Google, then tap on the connected Google account. 2. Remove the connected Google account and wait for a few moments until it has been removed from Google Play as well. 3. Once your previous account has been removed, you just need to create and then connect your new Google account. 4. Ensure that this new Google account is based on your country or region of choice, because this will change the country or region of your Google Play automatically as well. Part 4. How to Fake Location When Needed? Whilst the methods and solutions which have been explored in this article can be useful in certain situations, the truth is that they do still have their limitations and disadvantages. To change your country, you have to set up a new country in Google Play. To set up a new country, you must be in that country. When moving to a new country personally is not feasible or possible for you, then an incredibly effective alternative is to download and install a location spoofing application such as UnicTool TailorGo. Conclusion It can be incredibly inconvenient and annoying when you realise that you cannot download a particular application or avail of a specific service in your Google Play simply because of your geographical location. There are several ways to address this issue, some of which we have explored in this article, but by far the most straightforward and simplest solution is to change your GPS location with a virtual GPS location changer. With UnicTool TailorGo, you'll be able to seamlessly and quickly change your location in your Google Account, with unparalleled efficiency, speed and convenience. Download Now Download Now Secure Download This is necessary if you relocate to a different country. The change will ensure your billing matches the country's currency. You will also access apps available in your new country of residence. It is advisable to change while you are in the new country. You should also have a billing method compatible with that country. What to note: Google allows you to change the permanent Google Play country after 12 months. If you don't have plans to wait for another year, use the temporary option. After the change, you may lose access to some of your games and apps, movies and TV shows, and even books. This might include some Play Pass apps. Although your Google Play Pass will still auto-renew, you won't install additional Play Pass apps. You will have to cancel your subscription. Lastly, you won't be able to use your Google Play balance linked to your previous country in the new country. It will be usable if you revert to the previous country. Use the following steps to change your permanent Google Play country. On your Android Launch the Google Play Store app. Tap your avatar to open the menu. Tap on Settings > General > Account Preferences. Under 'Country and profiles', find your name and country. Next, add your new country's payment method. - If you have none, follow the on-screen instructions to add one. This will be linked to the new country. The change should occur automatically after adding the new country's payment method. You will sometimes have to wait for up to 48 hours or sooner. You can also clear your Google Play Store app cache to speed up the process. On your Computer Open your browser and go to pay.google.com. Log into your account, then click Settings. Go to Payments profile and click the edit pen icon next to Country/Region. You will need to create a payments profile for the new country. Click Create new profile. Follow the on-screen instructions to create the new profile. The new change should occur automatically. You will sometimes have to wait for up to 48 hours or sooner. You can also clear your Google Play Store app cache to speed up the process. This method changes your country temporarily. It is beneficial if you want to access geo-restricted free apps, games, books, movies, and TV shows. You can browse paid apps, but you won't install them via the Google Play Store. This method relies on a VPN (Virtual Private Network) mechanism that hides your actual IP address. When you connect to a VPN server, Google Play Store will see the server's IP address. If you connect to a US server, your geo-location will be adjusted to the US. You will get access to apps available in the US region. Use the following steps to change your Google Play country on Android using a VPN service. Choose a reputable VPN - subscribe, download, and install it. Log in to the VPN app and connect to, for instance, a US server. Open your Android Settings > go to apps. Find Google Play Store and tap it. Tap on Force stop, under storage, hit Clear cache, and also clear data. Launch the Google Play Store and check on paid apps. If the currency symbol corresponds to the country of the server you chose, then you have successfully changed your Google Play country. Repeat the procedure if you want to switch to other countries. We recommend you use ExpressVPN. In our testing, this was the best-performing VPN for unblocking the Google Play Store. ExpressVPN is also extremely fast and can unblock other services such as YouTube, BBC iPlayer, Netflix, and more. It can also unblock websites not available on your network. We have created a guide that should help you find the best VPN apps for Android. Check it out. Here are a few solutions on how you can fix this problem. Clear your Google Play Store cache and data. Make sure Google Play Store is up to date. Use one of the best VPNs with a no-logs policy (works for the temporary option). Delete your old payments profile (works for changing the permanent country). Changing your Google Play country is a hassle-free process with benefits. You will bypass geo-restrictions and gain access to new apps and services. You may even get lower prices on certain paid apps. There are also promotional discounts in some countries. The VPN method gives you a flexible option before committing to one country. I hope this guide about how to unblock Google Play Store was helpful.
